8.17.1 Description of Service

Fixed Call Forwarding (FCF) is a service whereby a call placed from a station (the originating station) to a customer's (the FCF customer) telephone number (the call forwarding location) is automatically forwarded by Company central office equipment to another station designated by the FCF customer (the terminating station).

8.17.2 Limitations

- A. FCF service is offered subject to availability of suitable facilities.
- B. FCF service is not offered where the terminating number is not a land line station or a coin telephone.
- C. The Company will not provide identification of the originating telephone number to the FCF customer.
- D. Transmission characteristics may vary depending on the distance and routing necessary to complete the Fixed forwarded call.
- E. FCF is not represented as suitable for satisfactory transmission of data.
- F. FCF to another FCF number is not permitted.
- G. FCF is provided on the condition that the customer subscribed to sufficient FCF features and facilities to adequately handle calls to the FCF customer without interfering with or impairing any service offered by the Company.
- H. FCF will be provided for local calling where the FCF telephone number and the terminating station are both located in the same exchange. Further, FCF will be provided for local calling on an interexchange basis in those instances where the exchange serving the FCF telephone number and the exchange serving the terminating station have the identical local calling area, or are within an Extended Service Area arrangement as specified in Section 2 of this Tariff.
